

NLRB Impounds Ballots Cast By Duquesne University Adjunct-Faculty

July 15, 2012 | Labor Relations

The National Labor Relations Board has impounded ballots cast by Duquesne University's adjunct-faculty, seeking representation by the United Steelworkers. The decision to impound the ballots followed the University's Motion asserting that the Catholic university is exempt from the jurisdiction of the NLRB as a religious institution. We'll keep you posted on the NLRB's ruling, as the decision will likely have a broad impact on organizing efforts moving forward. The full story can be found here.
