Ready or not, states and communities are preparing to reopen their economies and face what it means to do business in a post-COVID world. For many “essential businesses” and healthcare providers, the doors never closed, but new working conditions are changing the way employers and employees interface, communicate, and strive to perform.

For those returning, how do you pick up the pieces and what must you do to keep your employees safe? Please join us as our panel covers best practices and offers tips for healthcare providers and businesses. Hear what Cook is doing to address employee needs across their facilities, and explore some additional resources and practices from IHIF's COVID-19 Toolbox.

Please join us for this informative webinar in place of our monthly lunch event, as our panel covers best practices and offers tips for healthcare providers and businesses.
