Watch On Demand

One small Minnesota town's employee handbook and a corresponding court decision has made waves for employers in Minnesota. The case potentially makes thousands of employee handbooks a target of employment lawsuits. Minnesota employers have relied on years of court decisions stating they had the right to disclaim any intention to create a contract when drafting employee handbooks. The Minnesota Supreme Court recently upended this well-established law.

In this program, you'll learn:

- How to update your handbook to avoid headaches caused by Hall v. Plainview
- How the Minnesota Supreme Court's confusing decision affects your company
- How to make your handbook better protected against employee lawsuits

1.0 hour CLE credit pending.
