

Amanda Lessard is a nurse paralegal focusing her services on healthcare litigation. With more than 15 years of experience as a registered nurse and nearly a decade in a law firm setting, Amanda possesses the necessary knowledge to help provide solutions to the evolving issues within the healthcare industry.

With hands-on experience in a variety of case settings, Amanda assists attorneys with the analysis and comprehension of complex medical issues. She is well-versed in maintaining detailed and accurate reports of extensive patient care plans, conducting and synthesizing extensive medical literature research and efficiently collaborating with team members. Amanda identifies, collects, organizes and summarizes voluminous medical records and analyzes medical bills to determine economic medical damages.

Notably, Amanda is actively involved in trial preparation, including identifying relevant and qualified medical experts, conducting comprehensive background research pertaining to experts and fact witnesses and assisting in deposition preparation.

Amanda previously served as a litigation nurse paralegal with a Boston-based firm, where she assisted with the analysis and understanding of sophisticated medical matters, drafted medical summaries and supported deposition preparation, including exhibit and outline preparation.
