For sites undergoing redevelopment, vapor intrusion can pose significant risks and is increasingly what drives environmental investigations and cleanups. Barnes & Thornburg partner David Gillay will offer his insights on how to assess and manage sites impacted by vapor intrusion during the First Annual California Groundwater Congress, Sept. 25-27, 2018. This three-day event will include presentations on groundwater quality and resources, contaminants, the California Sustainable Groundwater Management Act (SGMA) and a variety of other environmental issues impacting the Western United States. This conference is being organized by the Groundwater Resources Association.
