U.S. Escalates Russia-Related Sanctions

February 23, 2022

Highlights

The U.S. established sanctions on the Donetsk People's Republic and Luhansk People's Republic separatist regions of Ukraine that are similar in scope to the existing sanctions on the Crimea Region

The Biden administration also announced additional sanctions on Russian sovereign debt, two Russian banks and 42 of their subsidiaries, and five individuals with ties to the Kremlin, with other severe economic measures promised should Russia further invade Ukraine

Companies should review existing business activities involving Russia and Ukraine and prepare for swift changes to U.S. sanctions and export controls

In response to Russia's recognition of the so-called Donetsk People's Republic (DNR) and Luhansk People's Republic (LNR) separatist regions of Ukraine and Russian troop deployment to these regions, the U.S. has imposed new blocking and sovereign debt sanctions, as well as new geographic region-based trade embargoes.

On Feb. 22, the Biden administration announced new sanctions on

RELATED PRACTICE AREAS

International Trade

Russia's sovereign debt, two Russian state-owned banks, and five individuals with ties to the Kremlin.

With respect to financial institutions, the U.S. designated the Corporation Bank for Development and Foreign Economic Affairs Vnesheconombank (VEB) and Promsvyazbank Public Joint Stock Company (PSB), along with 42 of their subsidiaries, on the Specially Designated Nationals and Blocked Persons List (SDN) List. VEB is among Russia's top five financial institutions and PSDB is Russia's eighth-largest bank.

Because of the SDN designation, the Russian state-owned institutions and 42 of their subsidiaries can no longer do business with the U.S. and are excluded from the U.S. financial system.

Prior to this action, VEB was subject to lesser debt- and equity-related restrictions pursuant to the Sectoral Sanctions List (SSL) and was not on the SDN List. This new designation was made pursuant to an existing Executive Order targeting Russia's harmful foreign activities, and the formal determination that Russia's financial services sector can now be subject to sanctions under this authority. Other entities operating in Russia's financial services sector may also be added to the SDN List, including financial institutions that may currently only be subject to SSL sanctions. U.S. companies should begin preparing for this possibility.

Additionally, the U.S. sanctioned five Russian-flagged vessels owned by a PSB subsidiary and five persons with close ties to Russian President Vladimir Putin (two of which were previously subject to sanctions under a different authority), and increased restrictions on dealings in Russia's sovereign debt.

Companies should review these new and amended additions to the SDN List and determine whether any designated individuals or entities – or entities owned 50 percent or more, directly or indirectly, by such individuals or entities – are involved in their transactions.

The Feb. 22 actions build upon sanctions announced the day before on the DNR and LNR separatist regions, which are similar in scope to the existing trade embargo of the Crimean Region of Ukraine.

President Biden signed an Executive Order on Feb. 21 that prohibits new investment, trade, and financing by U.S. persons to, from, or in the self-proclaimed DNR and LNR regions. The Biden administration has stated that it is closely monitoring developments and is prepared to issue additional severe sanctions in response to a further Russian invasion of Ukraine.

The Executive Order prohibits the following:

- New investment in the DNR or LNR regions of Ukraine by a U.S. person, wherever located
- The importation into the United States, directly or indirectly, of any goods, services, or technology from the DNR or LNR regions of Ukraine
- The exportation, re-exportation, sale, or supply, directly or indirectly, from the United States, or by a U.S. person, wherever located, of any goods, services, or technology to the so-called DNR or LNR regions of Ukraine

- Any approval, financing, facilitation, or guarantee by a U.S. person, wherever located, of a transaction by a foreign person where the transaction by that foreign person would be covered by the above prohibitions if performed by a U.S. person or within the United States

President Biden's executive order also provides authority to impose sanctions on additional regions of Ukraine and on persons determined to meet certain criteria (e.g., persons determined to operate in the DNR or LNR regions).

The U.S. Department of Treasury's Office of Foreign Assets Control has also issued six General Licenses intended to ensure that humanitarian and other related activity can continue in these regions.

The situation remains fluid and companies should consider reviewing their existing business activities involving Russia and Ukraine, and be prepared for swift changes to U.S. sanctions and export controls. Depending on what transpires, further sanctions may include additional Russian financial institutions and there may be a potential expansion of export controls on foreign-produced goods based on U.S. technology.

Companies should note that geographic region-based sanctions present unique compliance challenges requiring additional due diligence, as has been the case with the Crimean region. Any entity doing business in the region should consider developing strategies to ensure its transaction and export screening procedures adequately flag major cities and ports of entry in the DNR and LNR, among other measures. Companies should also consider whether sanctions imposed by U.S. allies will affect business activity.
