

Alicia Barrs is an adept strategist that uses her business acumen to cultivate innovative solutions to client problems both inside and outside of the courtroom. Inside the courtroom, Alicia is astute and intuitive and has an uncanny ability to read the courtroom and masterfully craft arguments and examinations that are seamless, efficient and persuasive. Identified by her peers as a “rising star” and “one to watch,” Alicia is an experienced trial attorney that has successfully advocated for her clients at every stage of traditional litigation and alternative dispute resolution.

Alicia's litigation experience is not constrained by subject matter. Her experience ranges from patent litigation, trade secret and non-compete litigation, antitrust, unfair competition, contract disputes, and business tort cases, to eminent domain litigation, catastrophic injury and death cases, consumer fraud matters, and white collar criminal matters. Alicia represents individual and business clients in state and federal courts throughout the country.

Alicia brings order to large, complex matters. Notably, Alicia has served as litigation counsel for large electric transmission line projects involving the acquisition of utility easements through eminent domain, where she was responsible for hundreds of lawsuits filed in more than a dozen courts.

Outside the courtroom, Alicia concentrates her practice on antitrust counseling, compliance and internal investigations, building teams that mobilize quickly to digest information, identify customized solutions and implement strategies that advance the business objectives of her clients.

Alicia represents and advises clients concerning potential antitrust issues with proposed mergers and acquisitions in Hart-Scott-Rodino filings before the Federal Trade Commission and United States Department of Justice. She conducts market definition and competitive impact analyses and responds to civil investigative demands and subpoenas for documents and testimony.
