For months, vaccinating employees has dominated the agenda for employers.

Should we vaccinate or not? Should we mandate vaccines or not? How do we do this? What are other employers doing? What about state executive orders? What about the Biden administration mandate? Should we proceed or wait while the courts review it first? How do we deal with requests for exemptions based on religion or for medical reasons?

The answers to these questions delve into the legal and human resources areas. They also require employers to be savvy communicators with their employees. Join David Ritter, a partner at Barnes & Thornburg, and Andrew Moyer, executive vice president at Reputation Partners. David is a former human resources professional who has decades of experience in dealing with employment issues. Andrew routinely advises employers how to communicate with employees on sensitive and controversial workplace issues.

The webinar will feature a Q&A session. You may ask questions during the Q&A or submit them when you register.
