

MEDIA

Leading Role

Barnes & Thornburg's Media Practice Group lawyers represent newspapers, television and radio stations, networks, wire services, cable television companies, and publishers.

The firm has represented the news media in litigation involving defamation, access to documents and meetings, privacy rights, and the like. The firm is also active in the enforcement of rights of publicity and issues arising from the commercial use of celebrity names and likenesses of many historical figures.

In addition to litigation, the Media Practice Group provides counseling on questions arising under the Access to Public Records Act, the Open Door Law, the Freedom of Information Act, copyright law, and local newsrack and solicitation ordinances. We assist reporters and photographers in resisting subpoenas from civil and criminal litigants who seek unpublished journalistic work product (such as notes, photographs, and -out-takes -). We provide prepublication and prebroadcast review of news stories and books and advise clients in connection with publishing agreements for books, works of art, music, and computer software.

Attorneys from the group have made presentations on defamation, access, and copyright issues to a variety of media and law groups, including seminars organized by the United States Information Agency for journalists in Brazil and the Bahamas. We also present newsroom seminars to provide practical advice to reporters and editors on legal issues they confront in news-gathering.

For several years, we have prepared the survey of Indiana law for the Libel Defense Resource Center's 50 State Survey of Current Developments in Media Libel Law. Our firm authored the Indiana section of Tapping Officials - Secrets: A State Open Government Compendium, Why Barnes & Thornburg?

Finding new ways to help clients identify solutions and new business opportunities, across industries, is at our core. We are, at times, more than lawyers, we are advisers bringing new ideas to light. We understand what keeps you up at night and work collaboratively to find practical and creative solutions, at the heart of business.
