Wage And Hour Practice Group Recognized As 2020 National Law Review Go-To Thought Leaders

December 15, 2020 | Chicago | Indianapolis | Los Angeles

The Wage and Hour Practice Group has been recognized as 2020 National Law Review Go-To Thought Leaders for the group's innovative COVID-19 Related Workplace Litigation Tracker, which monitors workplace litigation in state and federal courts across the country and analyzes labor and employment claim trends, giving employers guidance on compliance and preventive measures. National Law Review called the tracker "an invaluable resource for employers during these turbulent times." The lead editors are Pete Wozniak and Mark Wallin. Authors in 2020 have been the editorial team and Terese Connolly, Christina Janice, Cristina McNeiley, Norma Zeitler, Caroline Dickey, Sana Swe, Carolina Flores, Anthony Glenn, Taylor Hunter, Colleen Naumovich, and Alex Petrik.
