We know labor and employment legal issues keep you up at night. Employers of all sizes list labor and employment law compliance as one of their biggest concerns. Litigation trends validate your concerns. Employment litigation has increased 400% during the past 20 years and ranks as the second most frequent type of lawsuit faced by U.S. employers. A growing trend of class actions, more regulation, and increased government audits adds to the importance of legal compliance in this area.

Join Mike Palmer of Barnes & Thornburg's Labor & Employment Department and Michiana SHRM's Legislative Director for a new, interactive Work Right! discussion series. Mike will briefly introduce pressing labor and employment law issues and facilitate a practical discussion among presenters and attendees about how to address these risks.

The inaugural conversation will cover the latest COVID-19 preparedness guidance and impacts on employers, recent U.S. Supreme Court labor and employment cases, the impact of the Black Lives Matter movement on the workplace, and many other issues.
