

Alejandra Reichard supports businesses in an array of civil disputes ranging from complex commercial litigation to toxic tort and product liability defense. Alejandra's experience spans virtually every stage of the litigation process, from pre-suit and internal investigations to dispute resolution, trial and appeals.

With a litigation practice that is national in scope, Alejandra serves clients that range from small businesses and individuals to Fortune 500 companies.

Alejandra focuses on commercial and contractual disputes, product liability lawsuits and other civil litigation matters involving personal injury, wrongful death or property damage. She provides the analysis, counsel, and strategy required to help clients navigate the challenges that modern-day businesses face across a range of different industries, including manufacturing, utilities, education, and health and behavioral services.

In addition to her experience in traditional litigation, Alejandra has provided support for clients facing the complexities of class actions and multidistrict litigation. Alejandra can also help clients navigate alternative methods of dispute resolution, such as arbitration and mediation.

Alejandra was the 2016 recipient of Barnes & Thornburg's diversity scholarship. Prior to joining Barnes & Thornburg full-time, Alejandra was a summer associate for two summers in the Indianapolis office.
