The use of videoconferencing technology has become an increasingly critical part of business throughout the legal industry. With the continuing impacts of COVID-19, virtual alternative dispute resolution (ADR) have taken on a new importance, providing lawyers and their clients with a viable means of resolving cases remotely. Some insurance-related disputes may be particularly well-suited to virtual ADR. Please join us for a lively discussion about virtual practice in the insurance space and relating to COVID.

This conversation will address key lessons learned from experience, including:

- Advantages and opportunities of virtual ADR
- Common challenges/concerns associated with the technique
- Preparation details for lawyers and clients

- Best practices for ensuring in-person advocacy skills translate to remote mediations and arbitrations

The webinar will feature a Q&A session. You may ask questions during the Q&A or submit them when you register.

1.0 hour CLE credit pending.
