

With decades of paralegal experience, Lottie Wathen brings to the firm a deep background in litigation.

She works with attorneys and clients in the areas of commercial litigation, toxic torts and product liability.

Lottie was previously a paralegal with a full-service business law firm in Indianapolis. She supported attorneys with litigation needs of companies across the U.S. She also has experience working as a paralegal in civil litigation, family law and domestic relations, personal injury, insurance defense, probate and estate planning.

Since 2013, Lottie has been a contributing writer for numerous legal publications. Her articles have been featured in the National Paralegal Reporter, Paralegal Today, the Institute for Paralegal Education Newsletter and more.
