Organization (BIO)

The life sciences sector in Indiana has a $77 billion economic impact on the state's economy.

While we're a large player in the industry, there are always lessons to be learned from other states and communities. Pete Pellerito is the author behind BIO's best practices reports around economic development, workforce trends, and technology transfer. Please join us as he shares what he's seeing from around the country and dives into ideas we might want to explore in the future.
