

Barnes & Thornburg LLP Adds Motorsports Practice Group

April 15, 2013

INDIANAPOLIS – As several motorsports circuits kick into gear for the spring and summer months, Barnes & Thornburg LLP has created its own team to bring a comprehensive range of legal services to the firm's clients. The new Motorsports Practice Group counsels teams, track owners, drivers, sponsors, municipalities, sanctioning bodies, equipment manufacturers and suppliers on issues unique to the motorsports industry.

The group's 35 attorneys apply their skills in corporate, labor and employment, intellectual property, real estate, contracts, media and financial services law to meet the various needs of motorsports clients. Barnes & Thornburg's comprehensive range of motorsports services include contracts and licensing; labor and employment; immigration; intellectual property; media, vendor and sponsor issues; corporate and regulatory; tax and wealth management; litigation; project financing and economic incentives; antitrust; real estate; creditors' rights and aviation.

"The addition of the Motorsports Practice Group brings many of our talented attorneys together under one umbrella to better serve the range of legal needs unique to the international world of motorsports," said Alan Levin, managing partner of Barnes & Thornburg.

Practice group chair, Mark Owens, regularly works on matters related to the automotive industry.

"The combined knowledge of our attorneys concerning automotive and motorsports issues provides a unique solution for motorsports clients," said Owens. "The range of legal issues we can tackle on a national and international basis presents a great option for those in the industry seeking comprehensive legal support."
